FOREWORD

School spirit is the total feeling one has when thinking about school and the people connected with it. It is the incentive that makes one want to participate in some worthwhile extracurricular activity, or work for a policy that will improve the school. It is a desire to achieve a friendly, co-operative atmosphere in every area of the school.

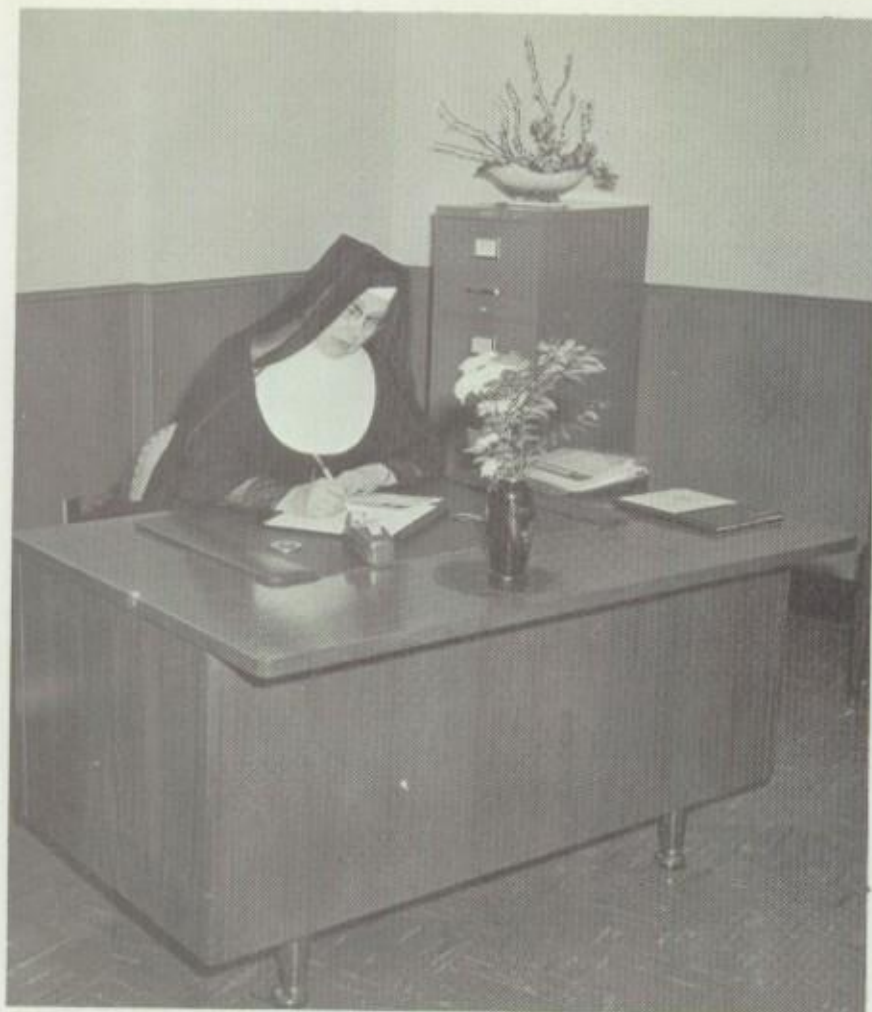

The number of activities does not necessarily indicate the value or sincerity of the spirit. Often, the school with the most numerous activities is the most spiritless. A rash of useless activities is used to hide the lack of real spirit.

In our yearbook, we have tried, through various selected activity shots, to portray a full and complete picture of meaningful school spirit, in every area of the school. We hope that these pictures convey some of the atmosphere and meaning of St. Joseph's Academy, from the united, successful effort of the seniors to obtain a new ring design, up to the final moments of Graduation night.

Worthwhile achievement stems from purposeful school spirit and a healthy attitude toward school and its goals. We hope that we have shown this kind of spirit in THE ACADEMY 1966.

Sisters can be the funniest people!

The faculty takes a break and enjoys the lunch period in the teachers lounge.

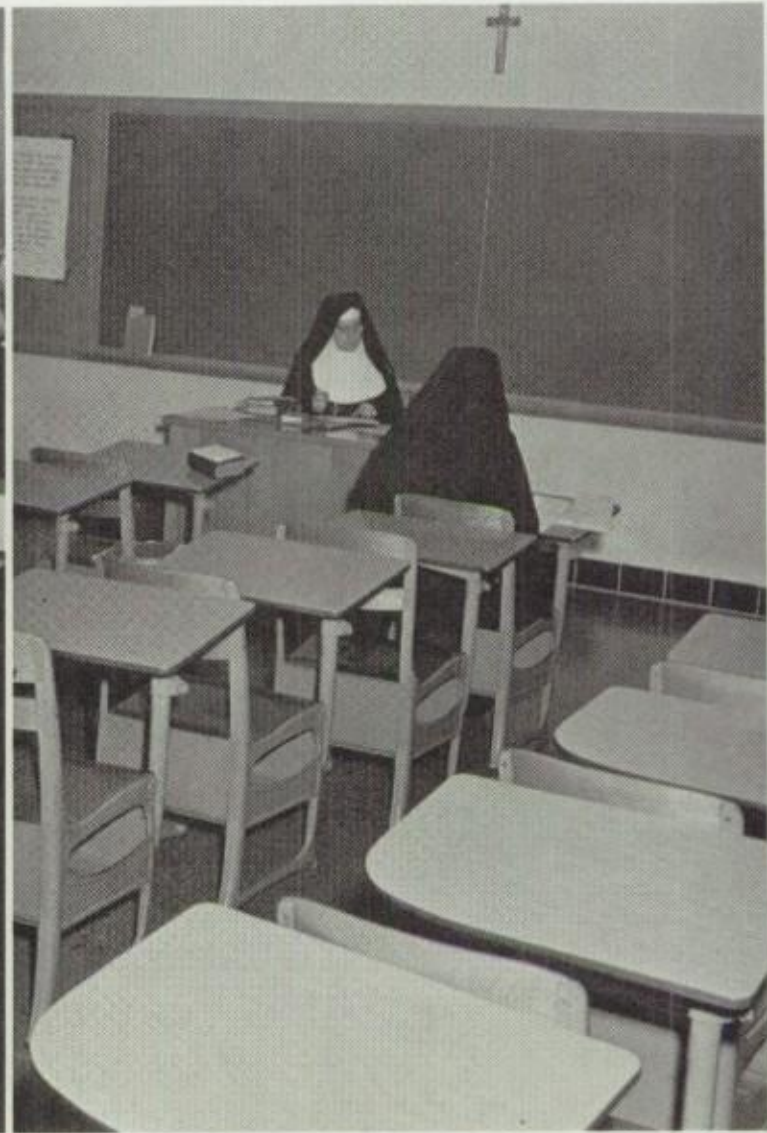

As Sister Kathleen Felice and Sister Teresa Patrick scurry past the doorway, Sister Michael Patrick and Sister Maria make a day at St. Joe seem less serious.

Never careless to their duty, Sister Veronica and Sister St. Kevin diligently attend to the finances of the school.

CLASSES

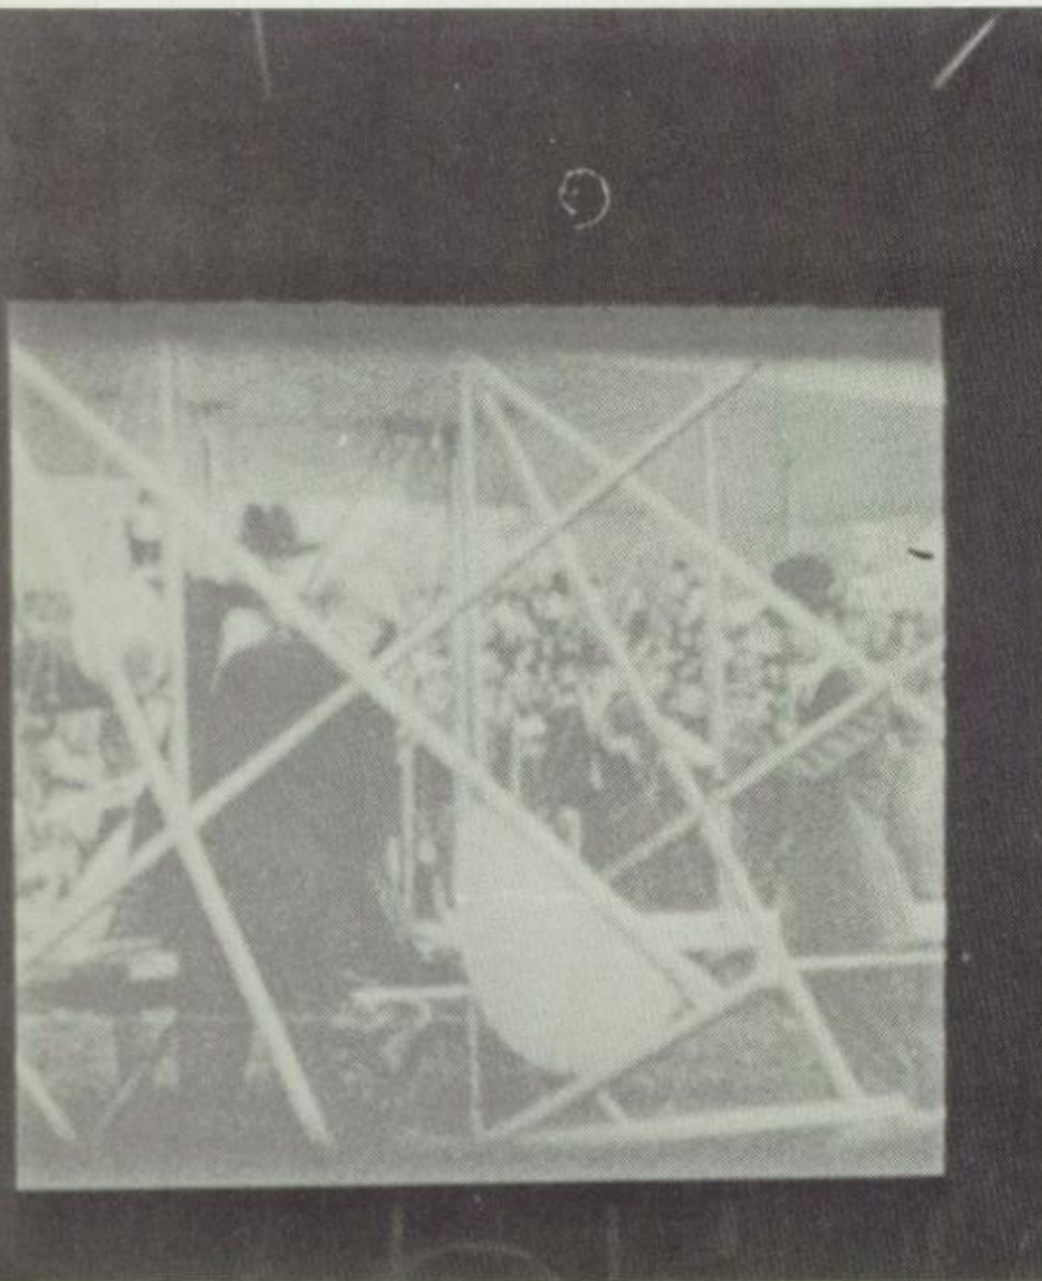

RELIGION, SOCIAL STUDIES

Sodality and Theresians

Religion, Guidance and Social Studies concern the science of people. Religion deals with man's relationship with God while guidance pertains to man's relationship with himself and others. Social Studies is a summary of the trends that religion, politics, society, and economics have set in the past. Through these, each girl finds herself and her obligation to the world today.

Father Wood's history classes enjoyed many good movies pertaining to their studies on various aspects of American History.

Could it be that through the efforts and diligence of Miss Pitney's Economics class that the stock market was saved in 1965?

During the Junior SSCA the chapel became a place of inspiration for all who attended.

Like the adult groups of Laywomen, high school Theresians are dedicated to the high purpose of fostering vocations to the Sisterhood through an integrated program of education and prayer. The Theresians is not a vocation club. It is, rather, a group of young women selected for their own strong Christianity and endeavoring to receive and to communicate to others a better understanding and appreciation of the religious vocation and its role in the Church today.

Joan Langhi officially receives St. Joseph's Academy's Theresian Charter.

At the Art Exhibit at Dubourg, Sister Madeline Sophie expresses her delight in the newly published Literary Magazine. Carol Hauck and Jeanette Lott point out some of the highlights.

The Lively Arts . . . OUR HEARTS WERE YOUNG AND GAY and the one act plays . . . DAVID AND LISA . . . and so goes the Fine Arts Festival played in-the-round all around the school.

The lively arts is a world of mimes, roustabouts, stars, ballerinas and surrealists. But there are universal responses; the promise of laughter, the catch in the throat, the wonderful awe. Happily there's something for everybody. It is all as old as our knowledge of music and laughter and despair, as fresh as a child's first touch of make-believe. And for the past year, this magic domain of the arts we call "lively" has also been, inevitably, a part of the excitement of St. Joe.

Sister Rose Catherine listens to the melodies of her student.

Amid a relaxed atmosphere of creativity, the art students endeavor to express themselves through their work.

The Academy's spotlight on the lively arts focuses out front where the glow is, or backstage on reality, seeking always the story that best chronicles the entertainments, diversions and artistic accomplishments of our time.

The lively arts matter because they measure more than our affluence and leisure, our taste and temper. They also mirror our maturity, our stature and our pursuit of excellence.

Patty Kay Booth charms the audience at Talent Night.

Linda Walker and Joan Simms give splendid dramatization at the Fine Arts Festival.

THE FINE ARTS

Pam Smith, Dena Hengen and Kathy Ramspott accompany the members of the newly organized Recorder Society, Daria Bloom, Pam Lapping and Sue Lucier.

Philosophy Behind the Cartoon

To get along in the world today, one must get along with the world. A man may feel a certain urge to serve mankind. He pursues this drive and reaches his goal. Behind that pushing force is intelligence, stamina and interest.

A creature so small as an ant seems powerless to us. Yet if we watch it build a house in the ground, we see it work with care and precision. It works its hardest to achieve what it needs and what it expects to receive from life. We can see the courage and determination with which one must pursue and attain his goal.

We may achieve things far greater than some man and insignificantly little to another man, but we must remember that we were gifted with brains and are expected to make use of them to their full extent.

Life offers a wide variety of paths to choose. Some are easy to follow, others are more difficult. However, we are rewarded not only by what we have gained, but by the effort we put forth toward reaching that goal.

It is this concentrated effort, then, that makes us complete human beings and not the rewards at the completion of service.

BARB TATE

ENGLISH, DRAMA AND SPEECH

A basic understanding of good English is essential for practically every field one would wish to enter. The poise and confidence that develop from speech and drama are priceless and can be used to advantage in every endeavor. The new English program in which students are grouped by ability instead of by grade helps increase one's interest by being in contact with those of similar aptitude.

The Peanuts cartoon and the paragraph beneath it demonstrate an example of the benefits one can obtain from non-traditional studies. While plays, novels, and poems are, of course, still being studied, both teachers and students are realizing the value of films, television programs, and even cartoons as works of art.

Molly Schmidt, President, and Missy Smith conduct an interesting meeting of the Poetry Club.

Sister Teresa Mary's fourth-year French class and Sister Maria's Spanish students share the facilities of our modern language lab.

French-Spanish

Communication is the basis of a society. Because of the "closeness" of today's world, the language barrier must be broken often. With an acquired speaking knowledge of the modern languages--French and Spanish, and a reading knowledge of Latin, the language barrier becomes very slight.

Madeleine Bernard, our French foreign exchange student. Although she was here only one semester, her visit was profitable for everyone in the school.

LANGUAGES

Sister Vita Marie and her Latin students enjoy the Latin picnic.

Latin

The Spanish Club officers Marian Forst, Ann Benya, Secretary Colleen Hartmann, and President Claudia Focardi, plan their yearly activities with their moderator, Sister Maria.

An imaginative experiment in the new Chemistry program.

MATH AND SCIENCE

The math and science courses at St. Joseph's Academy not only increase one's scientific knowledge and appreciation, they teach a girl to discipline herself in order to achieve something worthwhile. The type of science courses introduced this year in which the students themselves discover basic properties and principles teach by means of the scientific method--experiment. In this way, all students appreciate the work of those who have gone before them, and the more gifted and interested ones are motivated into more advanced study.

The Physics class intently performs some of its more intricate experiments.

Squeamish sophomores delicately dissect a frog.

Advanced Biology Club Officers: Rosie Failoni--president, Betsy Weil--vice-president, Barb Gadsby--secretary, and Cathi Kartak--treasurer.

Pat Prindible and Daria Blume examine the Geometry class' exhibit on solid figures.

Junior typists diligently practice timed writing drills.

Sister Veronica gives Bonnie Bischoff a speed test in shorthand.

BUSINESS AND CLOTHING

In the business world today, there is an increasing need for more clerical workers. With the large amount of credit purchases, more office help is needed to handle the detail work. Many excellent jobs are offered to women with preparatory training.

Fashioning and fabricating the newest styles in clothes offer an economical way of increasing one's wardrobe. St. Joe's clothing course also imparts a knowledge of fabrics and their care. The business and home economics courses play important roles in the formation of future household managers.

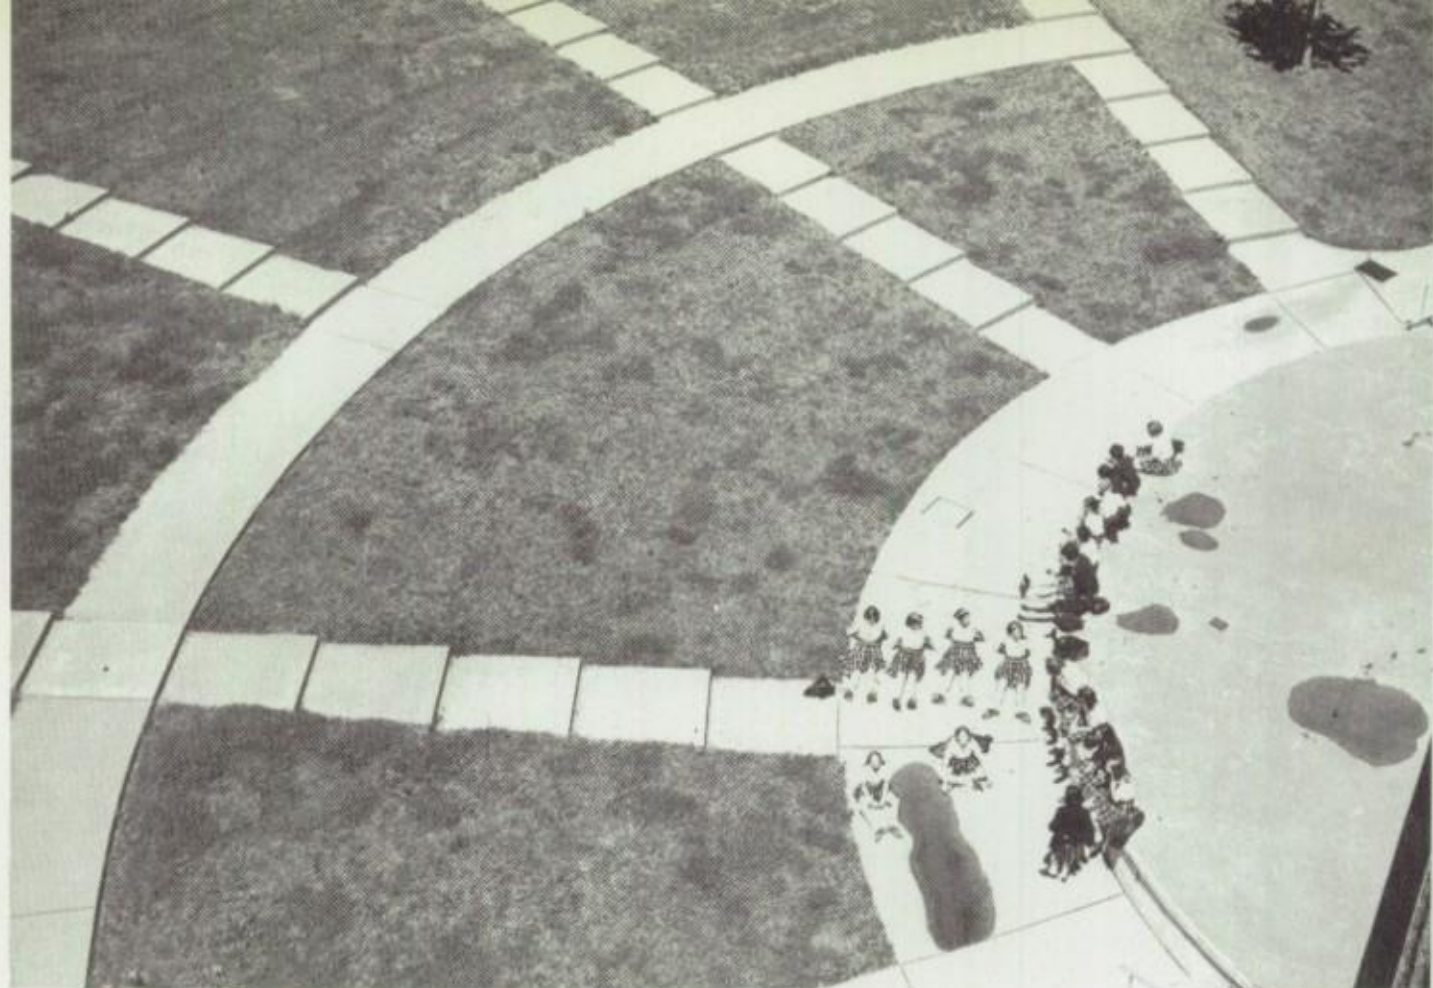

LIBRARY

The freshman and sophomore librarians proudly show their library service pins.

The entire school owes very much to the dedicated, unselfish service of the student librarians. Often an unglamorous task, their work is done quietly. Without it, however, neither students nor teachers would be able to study and teach as well as they do. Besides their regular duties, St. Joe's Library Club hosted a convention at the school and went on several field trips.

Three of the Library Club officers pause after sorting and issuing books to the rest of the school: Janet Parisi, President; Leslie Word, Vice-President; Janie Strub; The fourth officer, Ellen Vogt, is missing from the picture.

Isn't there a rule against sunbathing?

St. Joe's cheerleaders excite the school spirit which lies deeply rooted within the students. This years cheerleaders were Carolyn Thibault, Terry Neuner, Anne Cekovsky, Terry Sanguinette, Jan Parisi, Sue Shoemaker, Elaine Schwarz and Leslie Word.

G.A.A. officers are: Mary Tlappek, treasurer; Mary Craven, secretary; Ellen King, President; Ginny Meihause, Vice-president.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Having a strong, agile body that will outspeed others or glide over the bar with ease or dart craftily down the field glorifies God in the perfection of its being. But it honors God only if its exquisite harmony is an expression of perfect harmony within the body--in its lifegiving element, its soul. It is through his body that man must save his soul, must win the race that counts.

Since the Student Council works so closely with the underclassmen, it is fitting that their pictures be placed in the Underclassmen section. It indicates their success in uniting the whole school behind their many projects.

MISSION DAY

This year, Mission Day had a Spanish theme in keeping with the fact that the proceeds were to go to the South American Missions. Mr. Smith from the Papal Volunteers gave an interesting introduction to the festivities. An afternoon of entertainment preceded the evening Carnival, which was climaxed by the Penny Queen Coronation and the breaking of the colorful pinatas.

Christmas Dance

Some of the cozy scenes at our cheerful Christmas Dance
sponsored by the Sodality.

SODALITY

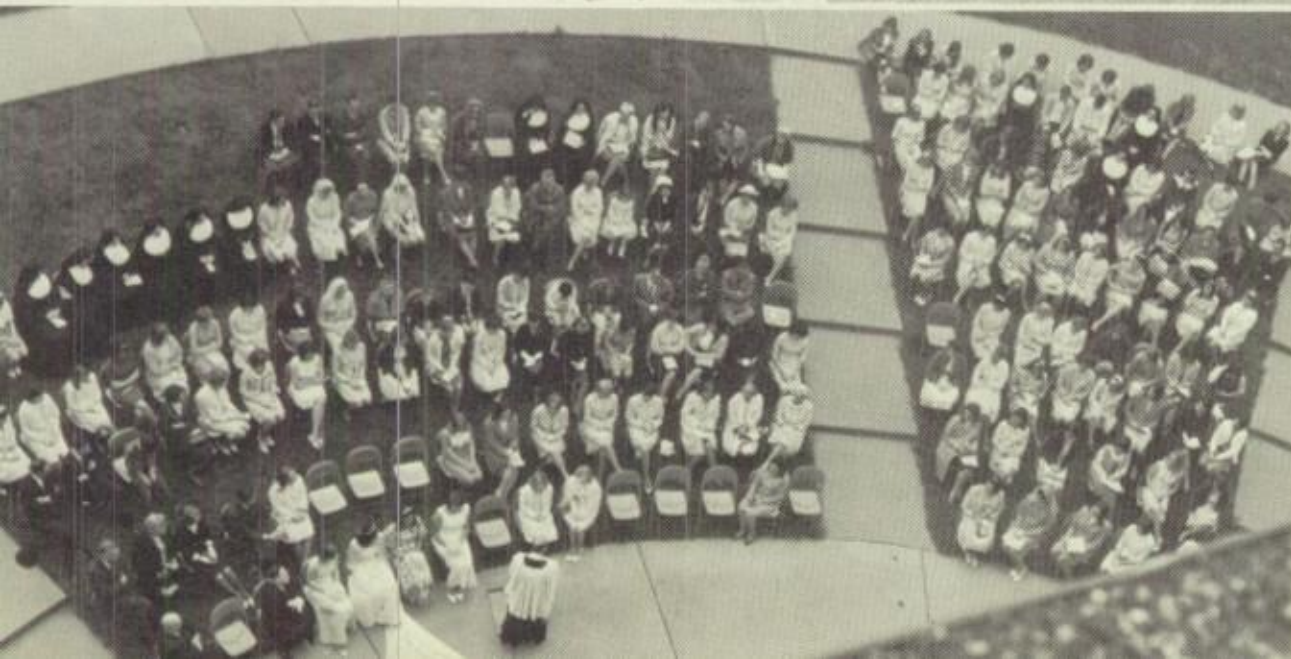

The Sodalist is an artist who holds in his hand the fine brush of his love. His canvas is every person whom he contacts; his task is to paint, by his loving choice, the image of Christ on the living canvases of his world; his power is the creative power of the Supreme Artist transforming his love into God's own love for His creatures.

The purpose of the Sodality is to form outstanding Christian leaders who, by their personal influence, will inspire and aid everyone they meet to live fuller and happier Christian lives.

Sodality officers surround May Day Queen Karyl Keffler: Linda Zuccherro, Secretary, Andy Armbruster, Treas., and Laura Gittermeier, Vice-Prefect.

PROM

Alice in Wonderland

From the bubbling colored fountain on the outside island to the bright red Cheshire cat on the stage, the 1966 Junior-Senior Prom was an imaginatively decorated affair. The center of the gym, complete with larger-than-life mushrooms and a caterpillar was one of the most delightful scenes of the evening. It was an event the seniors will number among their most memorable at St. Joe.
